Lake the favoured host plant of Genus nov. 63. It had above-ground shoots to 6 in with rather rough leaves to ca. 4–5 in (spec.), growing in patches & connected by underground stems. Where the surface of the soil had been recently scraped almost clean by machines, this plant was putting up new shoots (to 3 in) with more oval, crinkly, greener leaves, sometimes bearing a white, Vinca-like terminal flower. Several cases of Gen. nov. 63 on, or within 2 in of, these shoots, & one of a brief nibble at the leaves. Most of the insects caught were within a few feet of this plant. In tubes containing living insects with shoots of this plant there was abundant faeces & apparent signs of feeding.
